In reference to removing the no code requirement for amateur radio. I feel that the morse code has out lived it's usefulness. Also I feel that by no longer requiring the morse code in testing for an amateur radio license this would open up the hobby to numerous others who would never apply. I am 42 years old and am just now applying for a amateur radio licence. The morse code requirement has kept me away all these years. The hobby needs new members to stay alive. Doing away with the morse code would be the best thing for the hobby of amateur radio. Thank you.
